ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This descriptive pamphlet and the accompanying microfilm reproduction of the Records of Pennsylvania's Revolutionary Governments, 1775-1790, are the first fruits of cooperation between the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Bureau of Archives and History of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission. The common purpose of the jointly sponsored project is to preserve these important source materials and make them accessible to scholars. The NEH granted funds for full-time archival, technical and clerical staff to correctly arrange, catalogue, and microfilm the records and for the purchase and processing of the microfilm negatives and positives. The PHMC made additional staff and resources available for the project, allocated funds for the publication of this pamphlet, and provided space and facilities. Dr. Margaret Child, Assistant Director, Research Collections Program, Division of Research Grants of the NEH, and her Program Assistants, Amy T. Lowitz and Lawrence Christensen, have given sympathetic understanding and advice in many problems.

Mr. William J. Wewer, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, has given steady encouragement and support in administrative and fiscal matters.

During the protracted activities relating to the production of the pamphlet and the microfilm publication, many obligations have been incurred. Harry E. Whipkey, State Archivist and Director of the Bureau of Archives and History, has been involved in this project from the beginning. In serving as the Principal Investigator, he provided unfailing professional judgment and provided additional professional and clerical assistance from the regular bureau staff as needed to meet the difficult objectives outlined in the grant proposal.

Martha L. Simonetti, Associate Archivist, served as Assistant Project Director. She provided wise counsel on many aspects of the project. Her acquaintance with these particular records and her experience with previous microfilm publication projects did much to make the rough places smooth.

Roland M. Baumann came to the major archival and historical project initially as the Editorial Consultant, and later was named Co-Project Director as well as Project Editor. He carried out the indispensable task of arranging these sixty thousand pages of records according to provenance, and he oversaw the handling of the final arrangement for microfilm publication. In addition to setting up the records for microfilming, he prepared the hundreds of targets in the publication and he scheduled and supervised in general all microfilming activities. He wrote the introductory material and prepared the item and folder headings for the descriptive pamphlet.

In the preparation of the microfilm edition of Record Group 27, we have received invaluable assistance from Douglas H. West, George R. Beyer, and Gabrielle W. Smith. Mr. West, who joined as a special editorial assistant during the later phases of the project, did yeoman's service for thirty-eight weeks in helping us to complete it. His historical and editorial assignments covered a wide range of activities for the microfilm project. Mr. Beyer, Associate Historian, prepared the technical instructions for the machine operator, carefully frame-checked various series of the microfilm publication and looked after the necessary retakes and splicing. Ms. Smith was responsible for operating the camera, but she assisted in the completion of the project in many other enormously useful ways.

In the clerical, technical and publications field, the 3 x 5 heading cards, the targets, the preliminary manuscript and the final copy of the descriptive pamphlet were carefully typed by Cheryl Klipa. John Clark, copy machine operator, handled the splicing of retakes, and prepared the opening and closing frames. The aid of Harold L. Myers, Associate Historian, and Mr. Beyer in handling the printing arrangements is acknowledged. Finally, an expression of sincere gratitude goes to William A. Hunter, former Chief, Division of History, who ably assisted in the translation of numerous documents written in German script.

INTRODUCTION

On the fifty-four rolls of this microfilm is reproduced Record Group 27, Records of Pennsylvania's Revolutionary Governments, 1775-1790. This publication is divided into four sections: (1) the Manuscript Minutes (fair and rough copy) of the Committee of Safety, Council of Safety, (Second) Council of Safety, and Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania, referred to as the Revolutionary Record, Volumes [1-50]; (2) the Executive Correspondence of the above councils, 1775-1790; (3) records relating to the executive activities of Pennsylvania's Revolutionary Governments (twelve series arranged alphabetically); and (4) the one edition (1853-1860) of the corresponding published Minutes and Executive Correspondence of the Revolutionary Councils—known respectively as Colonial Records, the binder's title, and as the Pennsylvania Archives [First Series]. These manuscript and printed records cover the period from 1775 to 1790 and constitute the record of Pennsylvania as a government during the Revolutionary era.

THE REVOLUTIONARY COUNCILS OF PENNSYLVANIA 1775-1790

When Governor John Penn returned from England in 1773, the movement to resist London's new imperial policies and to defend American rights had already begun. In August, 1774, the First Continental Congress met in Philadelphia to discuss the question of Anglo-American relations. Pennsylvania alone used her constituted legislature to select a delegation for this new body or institution. Following the electrifying events of June 30, 1775, when British forces tried to raid military stores at Lexington and Concord, the Provincial Assembly, as part of the accelerated development of Pennsylvania's resistance movement, had resolved to appoint a State-wide Council or Committee of Safety and Defense, especially for southeastern Pennsylvania. This standing committee, which was invested with executive and military powers, would be Pennsylvania's governing branch for the next eighteen months.

The Committee of Safety, consisting of twenty-five members, met regularly between July 3, 1775, and July 22, 1776. The board was almost evenly divided between assemblymen from throughout the Province and prominent local leaders from Philadelphia and Chester counties. At no time, however, did more than ten or twelve members attend the meetings. Many prominent Philadelphians served as president and/or chairman of this respectable governing body. They included Benjamin Franklin, Robert Morris, John Nixon, Daniel Roberdeau, and Thomas Wharton, Jr. William Govett, Jr., was selected committee clerk.

Similarly, quasi-official County Committees of Inspection and Observation were organized throughout the Province. (These committees are not to be confused with committees of militia officers and committees of militia privates). These committees or boards, with the main one being based in Philadelphia, worked smoothly together to regulate commercial life, to circulate propaganda against the royal government, and to prepare themselves for defense. They also enforced and defended congressional and not Provincial policies. Although Pennsylvania had not yet committed herself to independence, her contribution to the defense of the colonies in terms of men and material was more than every other colony. By the spring of 1776, the opposition to independence was centered in the Middle Colonies and New Englanders held Pennsylvanians responsible for all middle-colony resistance to independence. The collective attitude of these colonists in 1774-1775 was a grand wish for the restoration of harmony between the mother country and the colonies and an unwillingness to demand independence and revolution. Because Pennsylvania's stern objection to the dissolution of royal authority was crucial, given her size and geographic location, the revolutionaries in and out of Congress did everything possible to force the issue with the Proprietary government and to swing the Province of Pennsylvania to favor a fight for independence.

The congressional strategy—devised by John and Samuel Adams—was calculated to dissolve the imperial connection in every colony. The proponents of independence planned to make an appeal to the people to undermine the decision of Pennsylvania's Provincial Assembly to stay in the empire. Upon the adoption of the independence resolution and preamble in Congress on May 15, 1776, Philadelphia's supporters of such a declaration immediately worked to circumvent traditional political channels and establish some alternative authority. On May 20 they carefully staged a mass meeting in the State House yard and voted to dissolve the Assembly and call a convention to erect a revolutionary government. The resolutions were presented and read to the Assembly the succeeding day. Though the members of the Assembly stalled to get a sense of the people's wishes, the revolutionary movement, owing to a succession of local challenges to imperial authority, had acquired its own powerful momentum and had exhausted the Pennsylvania Assembly's capacity for accommodation.

The question of whether Pennsylvania should declare her independence was one that had beleaguered political leaders throughout the Province. It took on added significance in the watershed months of the winter and spring of 1776 because Pennsylvanians were evenly divided on the question of independence. Pro-independence meetings were immediately held at the county level. Most sentiments expressed at these meetings seem to have favored the recommendation of the Continental Congress that the people institute governments "where no government sufficient to exigencies of their affairs" was established. Believing that the authority of the King and the Provincial Assembly had been successfully circumvented and could no longer promote happiness and safety, the Committee of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia drafted a circular letter calling for a Provincial Conference to be held on June 18, 1776. As the delegates gathered in Philadelphia for the purpose of overthrowing the government under the Constitutional Charter of 1701 and calling a Provincial Convention to draft and adopt a new State constitution, the separation from England was clearly widened. Four days before this extra-constitutional meeting, the Assembly withdrew its instructions to the congressional delegates for opposing independence and then it recessed. Now nothing stood in the way. The conference could organize an election for a constitutional convention and declare Pennsylvania's support for independence.

The "extra-legal" Provincial Convention met in Philadelphia from July 15 to September 28, 1776. Benjamin Franklin was named chairman. The delegates faced many responsibilities and labors in what was a changing political community and world. The resistance movement had rapidly become an independence movement. One of the first acts of the State Constitutional Convention was to carry out the Provincial Conference's recommendation that the Committee of Safety be replaced by a powerful new "Council of Safety, to exercise the whole of the executive powers of government, so far as relates to the military defense and safety of the province." It was understood that the Council of Safety would exercise executive authority until a new constitution could be put into operation and the committee government could be replaced by elected officials.

The Council of Safety, consisting of nine members, was established on July 25, 1776. David Rittenhouse and Jacob S. Howell were respectively appointed chairman and secretary of this newly formed body. Fewer new councillors were members of the legislature. It met 208 times. During the first sixty days that it governed Pennsylvania, the Council of Safety in essence shared the executive power with the Provincial Convention, which occupied the center of the Province's political stage.

The main objective of the Provincial Convention, which directed Pennsylvania's political revolution, was to frame a new constitution. It was summoned to circumvent the authority of the Provincial Assembly and to negate the opposition of the Proprietary Party and Quaker interests to a formal declaration of independence. Although nearly one hundred delegates served in this body, the responsibility of enlarging upon extra-legal government by committee and of institutionalizing Pennsylvania's status as an independent Commonwealth rested in the hands of an eighteen-man committee.

The Constitution of 1776, which replaced the famous Charter of Privileges, was adopted on September 28, 1776. Although the document was never officially submitted to the people for approval, it had been modified to include nearly all of the objections published before adoption. There were a number of objections to this frame of government, which was seen by the older political order as all too "democratic" and all too representative of the doctrines of a "single party." The alterations in the charter government—such as the abolition of the proprietorship, reapportionment of representation, extension of suffrage rights, abolition of property qualifications, institution of election oaths, and the elimination of an executive veto—represented the major areas of disagreement. For the Constitution's opponents, these alterations constituted tangible evidence of revolutionary political change.

Preceded by a Preamble and by a Declaration of Rights, the Constitution of 1776 provided for the following governing structure: (1) a powerful unicameral legislature called the General Assembly; (2) a revising committee referred to as a Council of Censors, which was to meet every seven years; (3) a distinctive twelve-member executive body called the Supreme Executive Council; (4) an appointed judiciary that was to sit during good behavior, but was not constituted as a separate body; and (5) a local government which was the basis of control for the entire governmental system.

The Supreme Executive Council was organized officially on March 1, 1777. Because the Constitution of 1776 vested executive power in a President and Council, the creation has been described as a plural executive. The Council was to sit annually at the same time and place as the General Assembly. The Councillors were to be chosen by electors at the same time and were to serve for three years. It was designed that one-third of the number would retire annually and that no member could hold office for more than three successive years. In addition to the acceptance of rotation in office, plural officeholding was also discouraged. The President and the Vice President were to be chosen annually "by the joint ballot of the General Assembly and Council." The officers had to be elected members of Council. The first President of the Supreme Executive Council was Thomas Wharton, Jr., who had previously served on both the Committee of Safety and the Council of Safety. Although the President had few specific powers outlined under the Constitution, he exercised broader influence in civil and military appointments and legislation than has generally been recognized by historians.

Upon assuming control of the executive powers of the State, the Supreme Executive Council immediately created on March 13, 1777, a State Board of War for the Land Service of Pennsylvania. The nine-member board was first chaired by David Rittenhouse, but the office rotated among several prominent Philadelphians. Earlier, on February 13, 1777, the lame-duck Council of Safety had created the Pennsylvania State Navy Board to care for war vessels, armed boats, fire ships, fire rafts, etc., and to construct and maintain the defense of the City of Philadelphia by water. The new Supreme Executive Council reappointed this board on March 13 and enlarged the number of members from six to eleven. The renewed call for improving the navy and defenses of the Delaware River was related to the threatened British drive to penetrate Pennsylvania and occupy Philadelphia.

In late September, 1777, Gen. William Howe and his British troops occupied Philadelphia. The distracted government of Pennsylvania moved to Lancaster and the Continental Congress moved to York to conduct their business. Congress and the State government of Pennsylvania did not return to Philadelphia until July, 1778. Before the General Assembly adjourned on September 16, 1777, however, it agreed to create a Council of Safety. In augmenting the Executive Council by the inclusion of nine additional men and by broadening executive powers, the General Assembly hoped to deal with the emergency caused by the British invasion and to quiet the public and private fears of Tories. The Council of Safety had full authority to promote and to preserve the security of the Commonwealth by searching for traitors, seizing provisions for the army, and regulating prices. In this publication the term (Second) Council of Safety is being used because the minutes and executive correspondence of this new body were filed separately by the engrossing clerk.

The (Second) Council of Safety met for the first time in Lancaster on October 17, 1777. Its meetings were usually chaired by the President of the Supreme Executive Council, Thomas Wharton, Jr. Prominent members of this new body included John Bayard, Jonathan Dickinson Sergeant, Jonathan B. Smith, James Cannon and David Rittenhouse. This body met for only forty-four days. And because the General Assembly was finally able to establish a quorum and conduct its business, the temporary Council of Safety became increasingly unnecessary. In a proclamation issued on December 4, 1777, President Wharton thus extinguished the act of the Assembly and declared the Council to cease and become void.

The Constitution of 1776, which had institutionalized Pennsylvania's status as an independent Commonwealth, survived fourteen years. Although the Supreme Executive Council was presided over by distinguished Philadelphians, such as Thomas Wharton, Jr., George Bryan, Joseph Reed, William Moore, John Dickinson, Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Mifflin, the governing body was wracked with a multitude of internal and external problems. In this revolutionary frame of government an intense and bitter political struggle between Pennsylvania's liberal and conservative elements was born. By 1790, given the adoption of the federal Constitution and given the reduced power and influence of the State Constitutionalist Party, Pennsylvania's anti-Constitutionalists produced a new constitution, with minor alterations, which the public embraced. Thus, on December 20, 1790, the Supreme Executive Council ceased to exist and was replaced by a popularly elected governor who, in addition to holding veto power over the legislature and large appointive powers, was commander-in-chief of the militia forces when they were not in the service of the United States. There were other political changes; but for the most part, the democratic forces unleashed by the American Revolution continued to play an important role and expanded to embrace the changing socio-economic realities of a growing Pennsylvania.

PROVENANCE

The task of editing Record Group 27 for microfilming has been determined largely by the series form in which the records were originally prepared and reorganized during the 1950's by Dr. Henry J. Young and Mrs. Phebe Jacobsen. In 1955 Dr. Young wrote (in the Transfer Lists and Notes file) that "the provenance of most of the state records of this period has been badly confused, partly because of lag in the training of archivists in this country, but more especially because of conditions of mixed storage and frequent transfers from one crowded interdepartmental storage room to another." Between 1955 and 1963 definite progress was made to restore archival order. In the "Summary Guide to the Pennsylvania State Archives," compiled by Frank B. Evans and Martha L. Simonetti and constantly updated by the archives staff, the Revolutionary papers are listed as Record Group (RG) 27, Records of the Supreme Executive Council, 1775-1790. For many years prior to this arrangement scholars, such as J. Paul Selsam and Robert L. Brunhouse, had used these records on mounted over-size quarto, black mock-leather binders. They had been referred to as the Revolutionary Papers (R.P.), Archives Division.

Naturally the editor of any publication project, whether it is official records or personal papers, always owes a debt to the archivists who had a hand in their original arrangement. So, too, an editor in the course of his or her work must evaluate previous work in light of existing publication needs, historical trends and archival standards. In an effort to arrive at a useful reconstruction of the files, nearly every document was judged on the basis of its nature and its endorsement. When time allowed, additional historical research also was done. This process led to some changes in the older arrangement and the adoption of a more inclusive title. Thus, Record Group 27 was renamed the "Records of Pennsylvania's Revolutionary Governments, 1775-1790."

The following archival changes were made in order to facilitate this microfilm publication: first, subgroup provenance of governing bodies created in the arrangement of the Records of the Supreme Executive Council, 1775-1790, was altered in Part III for research and editorial convenience. In most cases, the series records were made to conform to the inclusive chronology of 1775 to 1790 rather than divided by the subgroup (governing body) unit. The records for the State Board of War, which actually consisted of several series, were filmed together as a unit on one roll. The accounts of the Navy Board were also filmed with the above and under the Accounts File series. Second, for want of proper provenance the records of the Council of Censors, 1783-1784, were removed from Record Group 27 and inserted as Subgroup B, Record Group 5, Records of Constitutional Conventions. Third, an Accounts File series was created. In RG 27 there existed one cubic foot of Depreciation Interest Reports prepared by John Nicholson and directed to the Supreme Executive Council. From the Executive Correspondence series another one-half cubic foot of such reports was added to this new series by date of item. In constructing this file unit, we realized that many of the reports and inventories received and maintained by the Supreme Executive Council might have been ultimately transferred to the Comptroller General under section VI of "An Act For Methodizing The Department of Accounts . . .," passed on April 13, 1782.

Due to the irregularities of formal government during the revolutionary period, the provenance for some of the records is difficult to establish and identify. Often documents passed through the hands of several offices, and frequently were returned to the office that created the record. Initially, the Auditors of Accounts were appointed by the General Assembly, but as their responsibility grew the Supreme Executive Council was authorized and empowered to appoint any additional auditors and to receive reports, upon request, prepared by them. "An Act for Settling the accounts of the Late Committee and Council of Safety," adopted on September 2, 1778, called for the auditors to open an office. Although these procedures were not formalized before the appointment of John Nicholson as Comptroller General in 1782, the auditors created and received records for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. On the basis of this record-creating activity, the records of the Auditors of Accounts were appropriately maintained as a subgroup in RG 4, Records of the Office of the Comptroller General, 1762-1810.

After having examined Subgroup A, Auditors of Accounts for the State, 1775-1782, Record Group 4, it was decided that, due to the inherent relationships of many items, these records properly belonged in RG 27. The records added to Record Group 27 consisted largely of incoming and outgoing payment orders, receipts and accounts of the Committee of Safety, Council of Safety, Committee of Fifty and Board of War, to mention a few of the governing units. Also included were account records relating to the boundary survey and to the State House buildings and grounds. The dateline often included the name of the governing unit and the signature of the committee chairman. In short, these records do not seem to have been created, received or accumulated by the Auditors of Accounts.

In sum, the relevance of provenance and the levels of arrangement have been incorporated in this microfilm publication. But, in the establishment of a basic finding guide, some tailoring had to be done in anticipation of the different needs of researchers.

EDITORIAL METHOD

In accordance with modern archival techniques and accepted microform-publication guidelines, the editor has given careful attention to the relationship of records relating to the same series and/or subject so that they include an entire archival series. In this record group, Part II contains the large series of Executive Correspondence and Part III contains twelve smaller series or file units which have been arranged alphabetically. Documents in this record group were filed in every possible case by the actual date of issue rather than by the endorsement date or the date read in Council. If no actual date of issue existed or could be determined, it was then filed under the endorsement date or the date read in Council. Each document, unless an enclosure, has thus been filed chronologically.

The records were filmed at the file unit and item levels. In general, the following guidelines regarding the sequence of microfilming documents within a series has been adopted: 1) The last page, if it contains endorsements or numbers, has ordinarily been filmed before the text of the documents. A circle has been filmed in the upper left corner of the first frame for each new item or document. This circle usually appears with the endorsement page; but if the latter does not exist, the circle will appear with the main written portion of the document. 2) Enclosures have been microfilmed immediately after letters of transmittal. If there are two or more enclosures and neither the transmitting document nor markings on the enclosures indicate their proper order, the documents have been filmed by actual date. Enclosures bearing dates different from the cover letter appear in the finding guide as a See reference. For example, if the enclosure is Congress, Resolution, Extract from Minutes, dated April 1, 1777, the See reference in this case is (Peters to Wharton, June 16, 1777). The enclosure would be found under the above date. Documents bearing the same date are listed immediately below it. Likewise, documents indicated as "reverse side" and "with" are also listed in the finding guide below the main entry.

Although some documents have been grouped together under a subject and type heading, the bulk of the loose documents have been individually calendared. These headings in the Guide provide a brief key to the nature of the document(s), and they are designed solely for the convenience of the reader in locating items in the microfilm publication. Letters are identified by the name of the individual who wrote to Council and Councillors or by the person to whom the Councillors and/or the Secretary wrote. Documents in the series—Accounts File to Returns File (Military), which have been grouped together in Part III—have been arranged largely by name and county.

In order to establish manageable “headings” of two printed lines or less in the massive series of Executive Correspondence, modern editorial standards have been employed. The editor when possible has tried to standardize the names, offices and places contained in each entry. First, with the exception perhaps of the initial appearance, the names of correspondents and recipients have been abbreviated. This practice has been expressly used for names that appear regularly. Second, the outgoing correspondence of Council bearing the initial signature of the President and/or Secretary, such as “T. W. Jr.” and “T. M.,” has appeared but in inverted order, as “Wharton, Pres.” and “Matlack, Secy.” The adoption of this practice has avoided the excessive use of brackets. Also, letters addressed to President Thomas Wharton, Jr., and/or Secretary (Colonel) Timothy Matlack appear in the guide as “Pres. Wharton” or “Secy. Matlack.” In the case of multiple authors or addresses, the editor has endeavored to identify these individuals by group and to use this group identification as the heading in the guide.

Documents other than letters, as a rule, are identified by the category of document, such as “Application,” “Deposition” or “Petition.” If a series of depositions was signed on the same day and they pertain to the same case, the documents have been grouped together under the name of the defendant with the number of depositions relating to the case indicated. Often these documents are enclosures and they are therefore listed with See references.

When the date, place, or both, are missing or incomplete on a letter or document, it has been inserted in the heading in brackets. The places of Philadelphia City and/or County and Lancaster City and/or County always appear respectively as “Phila.” and “Lanc.” When the words “Comptroller General’s Office,” “In Council,” “Secretary’s Office,” or “War Office,” etc. appeared on the original document, the office has been silently removed and the place (city) has been inserted in brackets. Except for the most familiar localities or places in Pennsylvania, the name of the county has been added in brackets and the abbreviation

Twp. (township) has been added silently. All additional material used to identify places outside of Pennsylvania appears either in parentheses or in brackets. In the case of petitions, if the text reveals that the petitioner is from Chester County but the letter is dated Philadelphia, the former has been placed in parentheses and appears before the latter. Finally, every effort also has been made to incorporate the office and sometimes the occupation of the correspondent and/or recipient in the entry. When a political office appears with the county name and it is not bracketed, this means that the dateline is the same as the county in which the office is held. For example, Lt. [of York Co.] suggests that the dateline was more inclusive than simply York County. On the other hand, Lt., York Co. indicates the individual's office as well as the dateline of York Co.

If the signature was misspelled within an entry or if several different signatures are known to exist, the proper spelling has been inserted either in parentheses or silently. Also, if a word is misspelled or letters are omitted, it has usually been corrected without indicating the change. Corrections were placed in brackets only when the meaning of the word was in question. Punctuation and capitalization have been changed silently in some instances to clarify the sense of the writer. In short, a special effort has been made to prepare a Guide for a microfilm publication and not to prepare a literal descriptive heading for each document. One should not depend upon the Guide for purposes of annotation.

ABBREVIATIONS

The editor has tried to use proper and well-established abbreviations in item headings to permit ease in reading and to make for a more manageable and less expensive published Guide. Generally accepted abbreviations, such as months of the year, or those that appear in A Manual of Style, 12th edition, revised (Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1969) have not been listed. The following list contains the abbreviations used in this guide.

RELATED RECORDS AND MANUSCRIPTS

The Division of Archives and Manuscripts (State Archives) of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission has many significant archival, manuscript and microfilm holdings for the "Era of the American Revolution." A brief summary cannot do justice or give them proper credit. Consequently, the following constitutes a sampling of resources presenting the range of available record groups and manuscript collection.*

Researchers will want to pay particular attention to Record Group (RG) 21, Records of the Proprietary Government, 1682-1776, which is also available on microfilm with an accompanying Guide; and Record Group (RG) 4, Records of the Office of the Comptroller General, 1762-1810. In RG 21 one will find between 300 and 350 items that relate to the coming of the American Revolution and to the early war years. The records in RG 4 are documents that were received or created by the Auditors of Accounts and by Comptroller General John Nicholson. Since the offices were created to settle accounts and liquidate claims against the Commonwealth during and after the war, these records represent a significant segment of the American Revolutionary story in Pennsylvania. They enlarge upon the Revolution, first by furnishing the "nitty gritty" details of the war effort in terms of money, manpower and material, and second, by supplying material which is not fully reported in the Minutes of the War Committees and the Supreme Executive Council. Thus, the above records should be read with RG 27, Records of Pennsylvania's Revolutionary Governments, 1775-1790.

In the course of preparing this microfilm publication a large number of loose papers were purged from Record Group 27. These documents were removed because they had not been created or received by any of the revolutionary governing bodies. Obviously they had been placed in the Executive Correspondence file of Record Group 27 because they fell in the time period. These papers, along with those documents that remained unidentified and were not incorporated in the microfilm edition of the Provincial Records, now form Manuscript Group 275. Some thirty-one documents written by Daniel Brodhead, which were never printed in the Pennsylvania Archives and were probably acquired by the State Archives many decades ago, comprise Manuscript Group 276—Archibald Lochry Letters, 1779-80. Researchers will want to examine both of these manuscript groups.

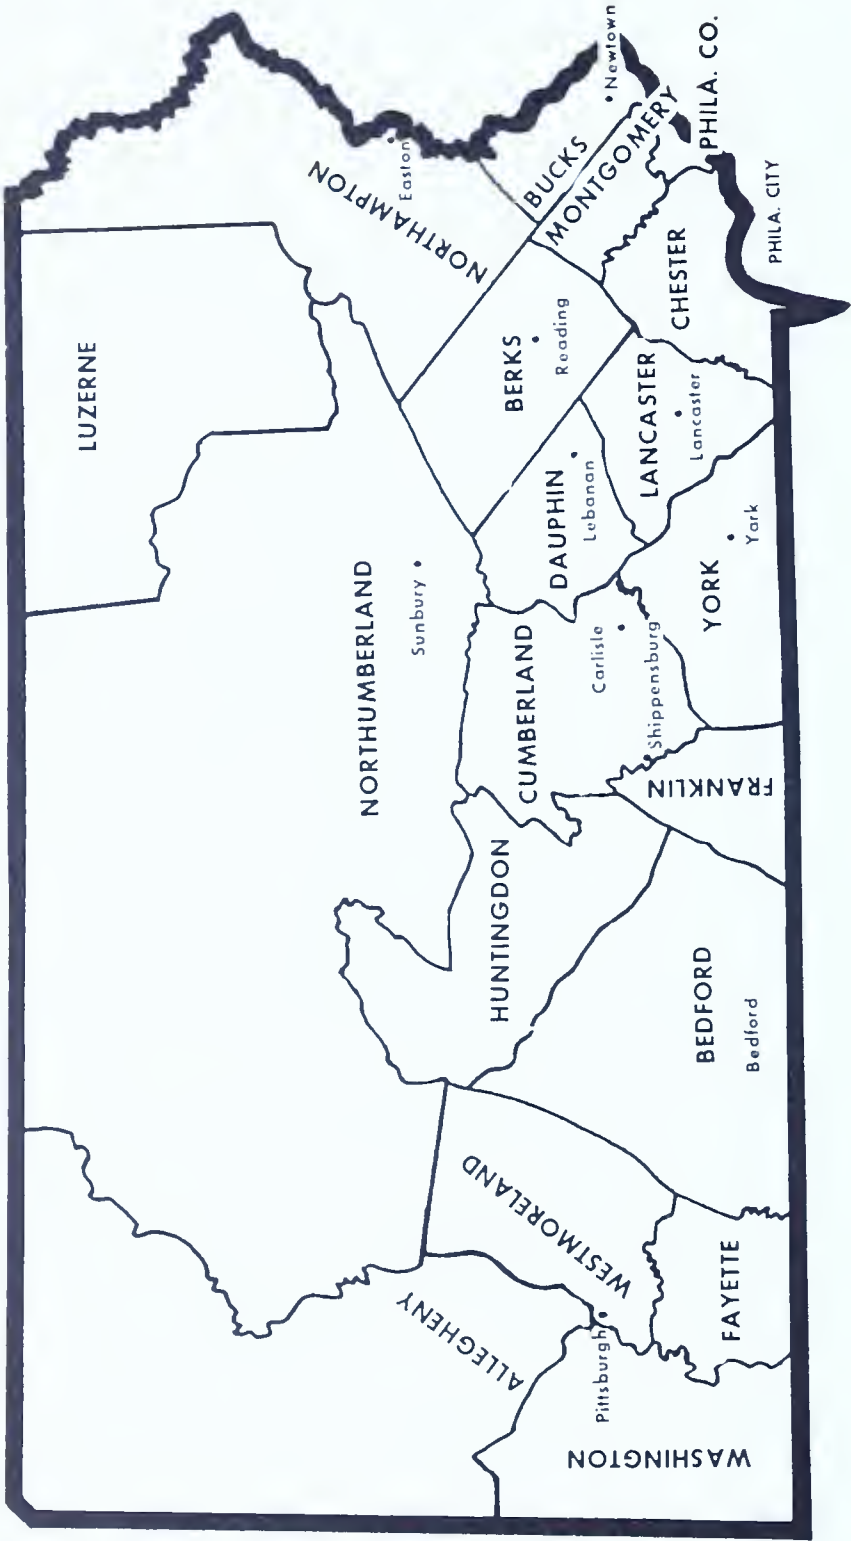

There are also approximately twenty additional manuscript groups that contain material relating to the American Revolution. In terms of cubic feet, these manuscripts are not significant. Yet, pertinent items are to be found in the following groups or collections: Baynton, Wharton, Morgan; Sequestered John Nicholson Papers; Burd-Shippen Family; Edward Hand; Hiester Family; Edward Shippen Thompson; Jasper Yeates; John Franklin; John Mitchell; Military Manuscripts; and the Willing, Morris, Swanwick Company Records. In the Pennsylvania Collection (Miscellaneous Manuscripts), for which there is an index card file, one can find letters of prominent figures of this period: Clement Biddle, William Bingham, Thomas Bradford, Tench Coxe, Charles Pettit, Thomas Fitzsimons, Joseph Galloway, Francis Hopkinson, Thomas Mifflin, Thomas McKean, Robert Morris, Timothy Pickering, Daniel Roberdeau and Charles Thomson. This listing by no means exhausts the store of manuscripts at the Pennsylvania State Archives. See also Harry E. Whipkey, Guide to the Manuscript Groups in the Pennsylvania State Archives (Harrisburg: Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, 1976).

In the course of the research and publication program of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, the State Archives has also gathered significant research materials such as manuscripts, photo-stats, transcripts, theses, periodicals and newspapers from a variety of institutions and repositories. A large percentage of this material is on microfilm, and some of these collections have restrictions placed on them. (This means that when quoting this material the researchers must seek the permission of the original repository.) With regard to manuscripts, the more notable collections bear the names of Sir Jeffery Amherst, Henry Bouquet, Thomas Gage, Henry Clinton, George Washington, Joseph Reed, Draper Collection (Correspondence of Daniel Brodhead, Josiah Harmar, William Irvine, etc.), Denny-O'Hara, Josiah Harmar, Moravian Archives, Pennsylvania Miscellaneous, Sullivan Expedition, and the diaries and journals of John Jenkins, John Hays, and William Alexander. Also, the Pennsylvania State Archives possesses six microfilm reels of Papers of the Continental Congress, 1774-1789, that relate specifically to affairs in Pennsylvania (i.e., Committee Reports, Indian Affairs, Pennsylvania State Papers, and Letters of Maj. Gen. Henry Knox). In the newspaper collection, one will find significant runs of newspapers for Philadelphia (61 reels) and scattered issues for other areas in the Commonwealth. This is a valuable, although frequently overlooked, resource. More detailed information about these microfilmed materials is available in the 1959 Preliminary Guide to the Research Materials of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission and in the listing of Record Group 41, Records of the Works Progress Administration, Pennsylvania Historical Survey, 1933-1942. A new guide to the microfilms in the Pennsylvania State Archives is in progress.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, also has considerable manuscript material pertaining to the American Revolutionary era. In fact many of the missing public papers can be found in the various private collections at the HSP and other local historical societies throughout the State. For a variety of reasons some of these records are also scattered in several state archives along the Eastern seaboard.

One will want to use the printed Pennsylvania Archives—including the sixteen volumes of Colonial Records, the twelve volumes of the First Series, and selected volumes from a number of other series—because they contain relevant material on the topic. More important, one will be able to compare the printed volumes supervised by Samuel Hazard (editor of the Colonial Records and the Pennsylvania Archives, First Series) with the originals. Unfortunately researchers will discover from time to time that the Pennsylvania State Archives no longer possesses the original or that the original was never printed. Consequently, one needs to examine both the list of originals and the printed material. Some of these documents, however, do appear in a number of local histories published during the nineteenth and early twentieth century.
